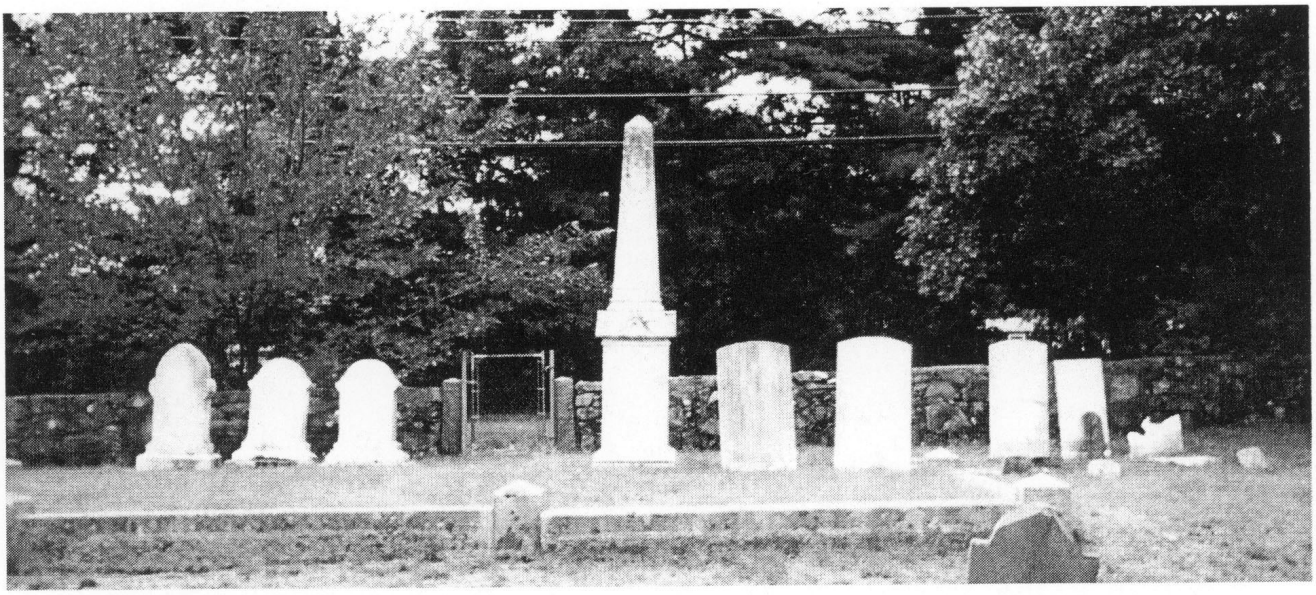
BURIALS



In some cemeteries in the towns of Salisbury, Amesbury and Merrimac, in Essex County, Massachusetts.

Copyright 2007. A newly revised edition, May, 2007, compiled and privately printed by Chester Wendell and Julia Lynne (Daniels) True, at Orangevale, CA. This new edition contains hundreds of new entries, corrections and added genealogical information such as maiden names of wives, parentage and other information, when known.

Dedicated to my wife

Julia Lynne (Daniels) True

For her tremendous help in compiling these burial records.

And to

Henry Trew

Sea Captain, of Salem and Salisbury, Massachusettes, his wife Israel Pike, and their descendents.

Located in the True Cemetery in Salisbury, Massachusetts is this memorial stone that my wife and I had erected in memory of Henry Trew, sea captain, first of Salem, and then of Salisbury, who was my 10th great-grandfather. He was the first of the New England True family and married Israel Pike. A number of his descendants are buried in the True Cemetery.

The final resting places of Henry and Israel are not known. It is thought that Henry Trew may have died at sea. His widow, who then married Joseph Fletcher, may have been buried on the property owned by her and her second husband, once referred to as the Fletcher Farm.

OF TIMES PAST

When I first began to search out my genealogical lineage from the colonial days of New England, I wanted to know more about my ancestors than just our relationship to each other and not simply accumulating dates of birth, marriage and death. I wanted to know as much about them as I could such as where they lived, what they did during their lives, and hopefully, to locate their final resting-places.

When I do find one of these burial sites, I often stand at the foot of the grave of that long dead family member believing that I might be standing in the same spot as did another relative or friend on that sad funeral day so many years ago. In my mind I can see others with heads bowed, mourning the death of a loved one or dear friend, coming together to offer eulogies recounting and celebrating the deceased's life, and trying to console grieving family members.

Sometimes a gravestone may convey a short but poignant story that adds insight into their life or and tells of the tragedy that took them away. Some died of virulent diseases such as smallpox, scarlet fever or tuberculosis, while others from accidents or old age, or for many women, problems relating to childbirth. Sometimes a brief message is recorded on the gravestone giving evidence of the great esteem and love that the family and the community had for them.

The graves of those buried in these peaceful cemeteries were once proudly identified with freshly set memorials of various materials such as granite and marble, but now most are forgotten and time has been their enemy. Several hundred years may have passed for some and weather, moss, trees, vandalism, and corrosion, have damaged or destroyed them. Many of these stones are in such a condition that it is impossible to decipher the once elegant engraved eulogies or information they held. In many cases, nothing remains of these memorials to mark these long dead people's existence.

As I live far away from my ancestral roots in Massachusetts, I have only been able to return there for brief periods to research my family genealogy. During our last visit to the Salisbury area in September 2006, my wife Julia and I were able to record hundreds of more names which are included in this most recent revision to "Burials". Unfortunately, we were not able to completely transcribe the burials in several cemeteries including Long Hill in Salisbury or Mt. Prospect in Amesbury. Initially, we were only interested in locating the graves of the True family but later decided to include everyone we could find and decipher.

In the case of my ancestral cemetery, the True Cemetery in Salisbury, Massachusetts, my wife Julia graciously assisted me in recording all the burials in this cemetery that we could identify from the existing decipherable gravestones. We also used other documents that identified this cemetery as the burial location. However, we are quite certain there are other burials there that remain unidentified.

Sources are identified as follows.

* Gravestone reading, fully or partially readable

 Vital records of Massachusetts to 1850 and those Massachusetts vital records found at the New England Historical Genealogical Society from 1841 – 1910, as well as various other historical records. Also, some dates were found on the Social Security Death Index on the internet.

 Death certificates or other documentation such as death and/or birth and death records.

The information shown in the following transcriptions does not necessarily reflect the information as actually recorded on a gravestone. When additional genealogical or anecdotal information was readibly available, such as names of spouses, maiden names of wives, parentage, cause of death, I added it. This added information is most often placed within brackets, quote marks, or as a footnote. Question marks used in place of dates indicate that the dates on the gravestone could not be deciphered or were missing. Some entries are only memorial stones with the likelihood that that person is not actually buried there. Also, it is likely that some names were engraved on erected stones but were not buried there, perhaps having remarried or moved on before their deaths. In some cases, a first name may appear on a stone with no other information about that person's life.

Errors certainly exist in these lists of burials and deaths. Age and condition of the gravestones, the accuracy of other source documents I have used, such as other cemetery lists and vital records, all can cause inaccuracies. Always independently verify the information when possible.

The True Cemetery

On Lafayette Road (Rte. 1) at the intersection of Toll and Lafayette Roads, Salisbury, MA.

The True Cemetery (Gravestone record GR 4 in Salisbury's published vital records) has at least one burial dated 1738, and is on land that appears on an 1884 Atlas Map identified as the Moses True Estate. An 1872 Atlas map shows a cemetery at that same location. Within the boundries of this cemetery are the Firemen Cemetery and the Soldier's Cemetery. Adjoining the True cemetery is the Jewish Cemetery.

On the West side of the cemetery, on the right side of Toll Road, a gate (shown above) can be seen. It was erected in 1992 by Charles and Bernice Felch as a gift to the community and by Charles in particular as a memorial to his wife Bernice. Charles also has watched over the cemetery as sort of an unofficial caretaker.

When first visiting the True cemetery in 1998, I intended to locate only the burial sites of my own family line. However, when I revisited the cemetery in July 2000, my wife Julia and I attempted to record all of the burials there using any decipherable gravestones we could find. Then we consulted the published vital statistics and other documents that identified other burials in the True cemetery.

It is not known whether any other records of the burials in the True cemetery exist. However, published Salisbury Vital Records to 1850 often provide burial locations. No one seems to know exactly when burials commenced in what has become the True Cemetery, or for that matter, how the property came to be a cemetery.

From our examination, it would seem that the earliest burial was that of Sergeant Robert Smith, who died December 8, 1738 in his 60th year. However, I find this odd as the next earliest date found was that of Hannah [Kimball] True, of Haverhill, who died in July 21, 1768, at the age of 39 years and 21 days, the wife of Samuel True. Hannah's burial was of special interest to me as she was my great-great-great-great grandmother.

The next oldest date was the burial of Sarah Eaton who died February 5, 1798 at the age of 85. At that point, there seems to be a gap in the burials until 1803 (Meriam Stevens) and 1807 (Edmond Carr) and then the dates continue to some very recent burials such as Bernice Felch July 25, 1992 and James Pike Jr., March 29, 1986.

A 1884 Atlas map appears to show that the location of the True Cemetery was at that time noted as " Moses True Est." An 1872 map of Salisbury shows the existence of this cemetery at that time but no name was given. I have not had the opportunity to investigate property records that might reveal when it was first utilized as either a homestead and/or a burying ground.

Sadly, this cemetery, like many other old ones, has suffered the ravages of time, weather, and vandalism. It also appears that the town of Salisbury does not have the resources to maintain it properly or to restore the stones. Most likely, the town officials are not interested in such old sites. Many gravestones are missing and many cannot be read because of age. Many more are merely piles of rubble or scattered about. Some more recent memorial stones have been erected by caring descendents and placed nearby or on the gravesites. Some attempt has been made to repair a few of the stones by someone, perhaps the Public Works Department, but not very well done in some cases. However, I applaud their efforts. All things considered, the cemetery is better maintained than others I have seen.

The names listed are in alphabetical order by surname without concern as to what part of the cemetery they are in. Unfortunately, this method of listing eliminates the benefit of knowing how one gravestone relates to another. Often, one large stone will have several names on it, with different surnames, with individual footstones that identify the specific family member's grave. These footstones are usually very small and are quickly lost to time.

I believe the following list is a relatively complete and reasonably accurate accounting of burials insofar as gravestones and/or other records indicate for the True Cemetery. Our last update on this cemetery was in September 2006 with two relatively recent burials added.

Old Corner/Colonial Burial Ground

(Also referred to as the Colonial Burying Ground and Town Cemetery)
Beach and Ferry Roads, Salisbury, MA.
(Laid out in 1639)

Salisbury's vital records identifies this cemetery as Gravestone Record (GR 1). A record of pre-1830 dated stones, available in the Salisbury Public Library, provided me with some of the following burial information. After several visits to this cemetery, my wife and I finally had time to record all the information that we could still find on the rapidly disappearing gravestones. I also used the Vital Records of Salisbury to identify burials in this cemetery. As I usually do, I included some genealogical information that identifies spouses and/or the names of parents. Information shown in brackets are usually additional information not necessarily on the gravestone.

I have been told that large flat stones called "wolf stones" of which a few remain, were used instead of the more typical "stand up" type of memorial markers with the intent to prevent wolves from digging up the corpses.

Listed below are all of the burials at this cemetery that I could identify. Some of these persons may not be physically buried here.

Researchers would be well advised to independently verify the dates and other information provided here. In checking a few, I found many to differ from that provided in Salisbury Vital Records and other source records. Most time I include this information bracked.

Maplewood Cemetery

On Ferry Road, Salisbury, MA

Gravestone Record (GR 5) in Salisbury vital records. This cemetery probably was started about 1699 and is now closed to the best of my knowledge although several burials took place in the latter part of the 1970s. This cemetery may have also been called Twin Oaks Cemetery. I don't have any information as to existing records of burials in this cemetery other than those entries in the Vital Records of Salisbury. All readable graves stone are recorded here as well as those that Salisbury Vital Records reflect. However, I cannot say with any assurance that all burial information below is totally accurate or complete.

Mt. Prospect Cemetery

Elm Street at Monroe Street, Amesbury, MA
Since 1852[269]

"Gravestone Record (GR 8) " as listed in the vital records Salisbury, Massachusetts to the end of of the year 1849, published by The Topsfield Historical Society, Topsfield, MA., in 1915. Perhaps this cemetery is the same one often referred to as the "Mills" or it is also possible that it was an older and/or separate part of the property that Mt. Prospect occupies. However, I have listed those burials "at the Mills" in a separate list. There is some small indication that "The Mills" may have also been a reference to the Old Corner Cemetery on Elm at Congress Streets.

This is a large cemetery and there are more burials in this cemetery than I have recorded here. Records might be found at the Amesbury Public Works Department. Other sources of information about Mt. Prospect might be found in the Amesbury Public Library.

The Corner Cemetery

On Elm Street, across from Congress Street, Amesbury, MA.

Also known as The Old Corner or Burying Ground near Amesbury Depot or "The Depot"

It is identified in Salisbury, MA., VRs as "GR 6". It is not reflected in Amesbury's VRs as far as I can tell. It was established in 1793 and the gravestones there are in very bad condition. Sadly, many American Revolunary War soldiers were buried there. The following list is a combination of the physical burials located and identified by gravestones or memorial stone, and those burials or references to GR. 6, which Salisbury, MA., vital records refer to as Amesbury Depot. A small number of burials in Salisbury vital records write "buried at the Mills" and some of these persons are in fact, buried in this cemetery, at least according to gravestones.

Salisbury Plains Burying Ground

Monroe Street, Amesbury, MA.

Salisbury vital records identify this cemetery as Gravestone Record (GR 2). This Cemetery was originally part of Salisbury, then annexed to Amesbury in 1886. It appears to have had burials from the late 1600 to present. Some information on burials in this cemetery might possibly be available at the Amesbury Public Library.

The following list is as complete as possible. Many gravestones are gone or unreadable. Salisbury Vital Records were also used to compile this list.

Salisbury Point Burying Ground

(Formerly Websters Point Cemetery)
Clark's Road, Amesbury, MA

About 1788 to present

This cemetery was located in Salisbury until a change in the town boundry lines in 1886 placed it in Amesbury, MA. Salisbury vital records refer to this cemetery as Gravestone Record (GR 3). According to "A Guide to Cemeteries in Essex County, MA." reference is made to "Gravestone readings" by Doris Cook done in 1978 - 79, and a W.P.A. listing of Soldiers and Sailors, both at the Amesbury Public Library." Another source of burial information for this cemetery is the "Essex Antiquarian". Our recording of the gravestones in this cemetery was completed in September 2006. Sadly, as is often the case, some of the gravestones are totally unreadable or missing.

Private Burial Ground on the Prince Albert True farm

Salisbury vital records reflects this cemetery to be "Gravestone Record GR 10". I have not been able to locate this burial site as I believe it no longer exists as such. Salisbury Vital Records, published by the The Topsfield Historical Society, at Topsfield, MA., in 1915, refer to it as a private burying ground on the P. A. (Prince Albert)True farm. Quite likely it was primarily a burying ground for victims of a smallpox epidemic. There is some speculation that the True Cemetery is actually the P. A True farm cemetery.

Two long time residents of Salisbury told me that a number of years ago a small burial plot existed in Salisbury, containing about a half dozen graves of True and Thurlow family members. Reportedly, it was destroyed when a self-storage business in Salisbury was built on top of it. This was probably the small pox gravesite that was on the P. A. True farm.

As I was told, a skull and some bones were found and reported to the police in 1985 and a gravestone bearing the name Moses True. I suspect this is the cemetery that the 1915 vital record publication refers to. Another burial in this burial ground was quite possibly Moses' sister, Mary, who died at nearly the same time, February 22, 1782 [See Salisbury, MA. VRs.]

Moses True, smallpox. Feb. --- 1782. [Feb. 8, in his 67th y.]

The following lists of burials and death memorials were extracted from the "Vital Records of Amesbury, MA to the end of 1849". However, not all were burials. A few were most likely the recording of a death or information taken from memorial stones erected when a family member was "lost at sea" or such. I have also included additional genealogical information on many of those listed, such as women's maiden names, and parent's names when the information was easily available. However, researchers are advised to independently verify this added information.

Union Cemetery

Haverhill Road, Rte. 110, of Rte. 495
Amesbury, MA.

The Union Cemetery was established about 1663. Amesbury vital records give this cemetery as Gravestone Record (GR 1). This large cemetery is bordered by three other cemeteries: the "Bartlett Cemetery", established about 1888, the "Friends Quaker Cemetery" and "St. Joseph's Cemetery", established about 1883. The Friends Quaker Cemetery has no marked stones according to the information I have. Although I have visited these cemeteries, I have not personally recorded but a few of the many burials there. Amesbury and Salisbury vital records show some burial information. Some of those are:

Lower Corner Cemetery

118 East Main Street
(Rte. 110)
Merrimac, MA

This cemetery started in the 18th century and was originally in what was then Amesbury but now in Merrimac, MA. Amesbury Vital Records give this cemetery as Gravestone Record (GR 2). There are many stones missing and/or unreadable. Another possible clue to the burials in this cemetery are the records of Second Congregational Church, West Parish, now Merrimac, as identified in the Amesbury vital records to the end of year 1849. We have have visited this cemetery but did not extract information from the gravestones still there. Few gravestones remain and most of those are impossible to read.

"The Mills"

Deaths recorded in the Salisbury Vital Records about 1844 began to reflect burials at a location or cemetery given as "The Mills." The abbreviations in the front of the book of vital records does not reveal what the name of the cemetery was or a specific location. In that a number of these same names appear on gravestones in the Old Corner Burying Gound in Amesbury at Elm and Congress streets, which is also known as "Amesbury Depot" or "grave record 6" in Salisbury VRs., I believe "the Mills" was only a geographical reference and not the name of a cemetery. I also believe that these people were interred at the Old Corner Cemetery at Elm and Congress Street. However, a few of these names are also found at Mt. Prospect Cemetery as well. Mt. Prospect is not very far from the Corner Cemetery. An 1872 Atlas map, identified as "Amesbury and Salisbury Mills" show two cemeteries: The Union Cemetery and the Corner Cemetery on Elm Street.

In any event, I have listed such burials separately under the name of "The Mills" until I can resolve this mystery. Burials at "the Mills" taken from Salisbury VRs to the year 1850 are:

"Sandy Hill"

Amesbury, Massachusetts vital records make mentions a number of persons being "buried at Sandy Hill" but do not cite a gravestone record number. However, on a number of occasions those persons identified as being "buried at Sandy Hill" also provide a reference to other information such as a middle name or initial or to identify a parent. Consistently, these references are to Gravestone Record 1, which is the Union Cemetery in Amesbury. As a result, I believe that "buried at Sandy Hill" was a term, apparently used for a brief period of time, and is really the Union Cemetery. However, I decided to list them separately until I can revisit the Union Cemetery and determine if these burials occurred there.

"The Ferry"

Amesbury vital records also make reference to persons being "Buried at the Ferry". Like "Sandy Hill" burial information, at least one of the people have references to GR. 1, the Union Cemetery. Again, I believe that those burials which mention burial at "the Ferry", are indeed burials at the Union Cemetery in Amesbury.

According to "A Guide to Cemeteries in Essex County, Massachusetts", published by the Essex Society of Genealogists, Inc., P.O. Box 313, Lynnfield, MA 01940, "Many of the early settlers of Salisbury were buried in Amesbury, as that was once part of Salisbury. The very earliest Salisbury cemetery is now in Seabrook, NH, on Route 1. There used to be a cemetery on Sweet Apple Tree Lane and the people buried there were mostly Pike family members that died in a smallpox epidemic. There are also little private cemeteries in many places."

Certainly there are other Trues and related family members whose burial locations are in many of the other nearby cemeteries. Unfortunately, time, weather and vandalism have destroyed many of the stones. It is ironic that we often give great praise for the courage and the sacrifices made by the early colonists of this country and yet we show little respect to the graves of these men and women by allowing their grave markers to deteriorate. One has only to visit one of these old cemeteries to see how badly maintained are the graves of our American Revolutionary War soldiers, graves that are rapidly disappearing because of time and neglect.

The following are two pictures that illustrate the condition of many gravestones in the True Cemetery at Salisbury but are also representative of the condition of many gravestones in other cemeteries.

[411] Mary Ann [Bartlett] Hills is buried in the Union Cemetery.

I hope our efforts will assist others who are searching for their long, lost ancestors. Please take the time as Julia and I have tried to do, by putting together your own compilations of the cemeteries where your relatives are buried. Then send copies to the pubic libraries that are near by. Future researchers will certainly appreciate your efforts.

In his 72nd year
Minister of the gospel 40 years

(Some of the lengthy inscription could not be accurately deciphered)

I delivered unto you that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins, was buried and rose again according to the scriptures. Marvel not at this for the hour is coming when all that are in the ground shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life and they that had done evil unto the resurrection of damnation. If the Lord rise not all them is not Christ raised only are they then immersed for the dead. Hear what the voice from heaven proclaims to all the dead; Sweet is the memory of their …and oft their sleeping bed. They die in Jesus and are blessed. How kind their slumbers are, from sufferings and from sins released and freed from every snare. For from this world of toil and strife they're present with the Lord. The labours of their mortal life and in a large reward." (N. Davis)
